Series: Anthem Young Adult and Children's Literature

Examines representations of Artificial Intelligence in contemporary children's and Young Adult literature and film through a comparative, literary-cultural interdisciplinary framework that combines theory with close readings across global traditions.

This edited collection examines how Artificial Intelligence (AI) is portrayed in contemporary children's and YA literature and film, encouraging critical reflection on cultural messages for youth. Offering interdisciplinary perspectives and wide geographical coverage, the volume provides theoretical insights, literary overviews, and analyses of contemporary case studies.

Readership

The primary readership consists of scholars in the field of children's and YA literature and film.

The secondary readership includes readers outside academia who are passionate about AI and/or current trends in literature and films for the young.

About the Author(s) / Editor(s)

Sara Pini is an Assistant Professor at the Technical University of Liberec (Czech Republic) and an Adjunct Professor at IUAV University of Venice (Italy). She takes an interdisciplinary approach to research British and Anglophone Literatures from the nineteenth century to the present, especially Young Adult (YA) Literature.

Emily Midkiff is an Assistant Professor at the University of North Dakota, where she teaches courses on children's literature and literacy. Her research focuses on science fiction and fantasy for children and young adults, with attention to what children have to say for themselves.
