Analyses and compares a variety of processes of change: in evolution, learning and innovation, language and meaning, self and society and ethics and morality

The book analyses and compares a variety of processes of change: in evolution, learning and innovation, language and meaning, self and society and ethics and morality. Taking a realistic approach, the book is inspired by pragmatic philosophy, in particular, that of Dewey, Nietzsche, Wittgenstein, and Heidegger, and employs insights from economics, sociology, anthropology, and social psychology. The book aims to give a coherent synthesis of ideas about change and aims to see how one can take a process view of various features of humanity, such as knowledge, relations between people, language and morality, and how, vice versa, that might contribute to process philosophy.

Readership

Graduate students of philosophy, economics, sociology, social psychology and political science. Also a wider lay public interested in the issues involved, which occupy several public debates, for example, on identity and authenticity, innovation, organisations, populism, elites, power, neoliberalism, markets and morality.

Contents

Preface; Foreword by Patricia de Sá Freire; Introduction: Definition of Terms, Purpose and Summary; 1. Evolution; 2. Learning and Truth; 3. Language; 4. Individual and Society; 5. Morality and Ethics; References; Index.
