Series: Anthem Studies in Latin American Literature and Culture

Explores cultural diversity policies in Argentina, Brazil, and Peru, analyzing their formulation, contradictions, and impacts on marginalized groups, while situating these discussions within Latin America's colonial legacy and decolonization efforts

This book delves into the evolution of cultural diversity policies in Argentina, Brazil, and Peru. It highlights the struggles of marginalized groups for equality and explores how these policies challenge the monocultural narratives imposed by nation-states over the last 15 years.

Readership

The book primarily appeals to readers interested in cultural management, whether from the perspective of grassroots organizations or institutional settings. This audience may include both professional and amateur artists who are concerned with policies that support the funding of culture and the arts.

About the Author(s) / Editor(s)

Federico Escribal, professor at the Universidad Nacional de las Artes (Argentina), specializes in cultural policies and diversity. He holds an extensive experience in academia, public sector leadership, and private consultancy.
